The Weekly Regiſter.

LONDON, SATURDAY, February 20, 1731. NUMB. XLV.

Some farther Thoughts on the Liberty of the Subject; with a Hint on the Proſecutions of the Juſtices of the Peace in Ireland.

THERE is no body, I dare venture to affirm, has a more religious Regard for the Publick than my ſelf. 'Tis my firſt Principle, that every Man of Honour ſhould really eſteem it his political Parent, and pique himſelf moſt remarkably, on having diſcharg'd the Duty of a Son, to the very utmoſt of his Power and Capacity.---Could I have any Influence upon Mankind, I would recommend it to their Children, as a noble Part of their Catechiſm; and what, next to their Adoration of the Omnipotent, ſhould infallibly take Place. I would have them inur'd to a Zeal for their Country, and a Deſire of being uſeful to it; to honour thoſe, who have done it Service, and treat with Ignominy all, who have been vile enough to betray it, however dignified or diſtinguiſh'd with the outward, imaginary Symbols of Fame and Glory.---Neither is this Declaration in Favour of the Publick ſufficient; I think my ſelf oblig'd to act agreeably to it. As a private Man, I ought not only to be obedient to its Laws, but endeavour to enlarge my Capacity of aſſiſting it, and enquire for the Opportunity. All Members of a Society voluntarily forego their native Right to Power to the Magiſtrate, in their own Favour; that is, for their own Benefit; and 'tis our Duty to obſerve moſt critically, whether they are faithful to their Charge; to be jealous of the contrary, and where there is Evidence againſt them, to make their Infamy equal to their Crimes.

We generally ſuppoſe Magiſtrates to be elected into Power, in Compliment to their Genius and Virtue. We ſuppoſe they have exerted, in their private Characters, all the Juſtice, Humanity and Moderation, that would adorn a higher Station. For this Reaſon we pay this publick Compliment to their Merit, and inlarge their Power of doing Good for their Sakes, as well as our own. Hence we make it a Man's Intereſt to behave well in all Circumſtances; and hence that excellent Maxim, that Honeſty is the beſt Policy. Whatever wrong-headed, ambitious Men may imagine to themſelves of meer Power and empty Title, 'tis only Truth and Honour, that are the real Subjects of Eſteem and Reverence. We bow down ſincerely only to thoſe we love; and we can love none, but the Friends, and Fathers of the Publick.---All thoſe, who miſtake themſelves for the Publick, and fancy the Pomp of Power, to be the Eſſence of Juſtice; all thoſe will be diſregarded by every honeſt Man, as they ought. The whole World will be Spies on their Behaviour, and its higheſt Concern will be to ſee them brought to Juſtice.---A good Magiſtrate can hardly be ſufficiently rewarded; a bad one ſufficiently puniſh'd.---'Tis never ſo much in the Power of the People, to injure the Community, as 'tis in the Magiſtrate's. He is the Interpreter of Right, and the Breath of Authority; and can influence by his Command, as well as his Example. He may eaſily reſtrain our Enormities; but we are frequently much at a Loſs in the proſecuting his. Our natural Veneration to thoſe we have intruſted with the Execution of Juſtice, will a long Time delay the Accuſation; and his own Power will be an equal Bar to his Puniſhment.---But Place ſhould not intimidate our Reſolutions, nor Greatneſs bribe us to Injuſtice: The Debt is due to the Publick, and it ought to be rigorouſly demanded, and punctually paid.

I have long obſerv'd, there is ſuch a Thing as political Hypocriſy, as well as religious. A Set of Men ſhall affect the outward Signs of Juſtice and Honour; ſhall publickly enter into Leagues and Covenants for the Deſtruction of Vice, and yet make this holy Declaration, the Means of corrupting Mankind more effectually; and inriching themſelves, at the Expence of Equity and Honour.---Such Men hang out the Bible, as the Type of Religion, and commence the Devil's Agents at the ſame Time.---They make themſelves the Bawds of Vice, and only wiſh to be Gainers by the Bargain.---Gain indeed is the chief End, the favourite Vice of all their Actions: 'Tis an Equivalent for the Sale of their own Innocence, their Truſt and their Characters: 'Tis of more Importance than the Good of Mankind: 'Tis the full Value of every Thing they forfeit; and the abundant Juſtification of all the Evil they commit.---With what Averſion, with what Contempt ſhould we regard ſuch mercenary Creatures, who ſacrifice themſelves, and their Country, for a Bribe! Are not they worſe, and more infamous Proſtitutes, than the vileſt Courtezan they puniſh? the laſt only hires her ſelf out for Bread; but the firſt expoſes the Honour, and Welfare of his Country, to as deſpicable a Sale, and glories moſt, when he has moſt aggravated the Purchaſe.

I remember, ſome time ago, the People of Ireland detected a Neſt of theſe political Hypocrites; and nobly reſented the Character, as much as they abhorr'd the Crime.---Every Body muſt recollect the Proſecution of the Juſtices there, for treſpaſſing a little too far on their Authority, and being too arbitrary to reign long. Theſe were a Set of Gentlemen, who declar'd aloud for Rigour; and vow'd themſelves Reformers of the Age. Down with Vice, Profaneneſs and Infidelity, was their conſtant Cry; and bring out the Prieſts of Baal, that we may ſlay them before the Lord. Hence, reforming Conſtables grew terrible there, as well as here; and Scoundrils in Authority were licens'd to do Miſchief. Hence, Sin was to be cut down Root and Branch; and Uncleanneſs baniſh'd from among the People. Hence, the Perſecution grew hot immediately, and little Villains ſuffer'd in compliment to great. A whole Cry of civil Blood-Hounds open'd at the Scent of Vice, and follow'd indefatigably, till they ſecur'd their Prey.---People of honeſt Minds, who ſaw but a little Way before them, applauded their Zeal, and voted Selfiſhneſs into Reputation. This puff'd up the Vanity of theſe pious Reformers, and flatter'd them to believe, that their Characters would be a Cover for their Crimes: On this, they ventur'd to ſet Snares for Indiſcretion, and lay Ambuſcades for Folly. Gangs of confirm'd, and diſcipline Miſcreants were ſent in chace of Iniquity; and Commitments were the certain Puniſhment of an empty Purſe.---The Junto grew ſtrong, and fatten'd largely, on the Increaſe of Gain. Thoſe, who were able, compounded for their Vices; and thoſe, who were not, were too weak to expoſe the abominable Artifices made uſe of, to delude and oppreſs.---Men of ruin'd and broken Fortunes, obſerving the Value of publick Rapine and Plunder, made Intereſt for a Commiſſion, as a certain Way to remedy their ill Circumſtances; and Gentlemen of Figure threw up theirs, as aſham'd of acting in Concert with ſuch abandon'd Wretches.---Hence, the Name of a Juſtice was as formidable, as that of Inquiſition; and as contemptible, at the ſame Time, as that of a Bayliff. Hence, innocent Perſons, who accidentally fell into their Power, were conſtrain'd to capitulate for their Liberty, and bribe themſelves out of the Infamy of a Proſecution, they were ſure to be undone by.---The Faction appear'd too ſtrong to be reſiſted; they were furniſh'd with Emiſſaries of all Kinds, from Conſtables to Jurymen, and Evidences. 'Twas look'd upon as impolitick, to determine a Cauſe againſt the Reformers of Manners; and Juſtice was eſteem'd an Excitement to Wickedneſs.---In ſhort, the Union was become ſo ſtrong, that the Knot ſeem'd indiſſoluble; and had not they been too haſty in their Ambition, I don't know where their pious Artifices had ended.---But what is generally the Puniſhment of Villainy was theirs: Their Infamy became notorious; multitudes of Wrongs appear'd from beneath the Veil of Juſtice; the Paſſions of the People were inflam'd; and the Reformers became juſtly the Victims of their Perfidy.

I wiſh, with all my Heart, ſuch a Circumſtance as this, may never be ours.---But as what has happen'd in one Place, may befal another; it may not be amiſs, to guard againſt an Evil before it comes, and warn the Publick of a diſtant Danger.---The Liberty of the Subject, in the minuteſt Circumſtance, is of infinite Importance; and nothing, but an abſolute Breach of the Law, ſhould bring it in Danger. I hardly know a ſingle Situation, where it ſhould be arbitrarily invaded by any Man, be he ever ſo great; much leſs by a little Minion of Power, whoſe Buſineſs is only to regulate the Peace of a Pariſh, or keep a Village in Order.

Yet, notwithſtanding this Delicacy of Freedom, this inеſtimable Right to Liberty, we have frequently ſeen it violated, in the moſt outrageous Manner; and Men have ſuffer'd in their Perſons, without a Poſſibility of Redreſs.---I don't know how it happens, that we are ſo tame, and ſervile in an Affair of ſuch Moment; but if ever a like Misfortune ſhould befall me, I would call upon all the Rights of a Briton to my Aſſiſtance; and if in vain, I would bewail the Conſtitution I could not defend.---To proceed, in Caſes meerly civil, when the Privilege of Power has been exerted beyond its proper Bound, and the Sufferer has had the Courage to demand Redreſs, we have ſeen theſe Reformers induſtriouſly defending the Injury, thro' all the Intricacies of the Law; and openly ſoliciting in a Cauſe, that every Man of common Honour would abſolutely condemn.---All the expenſive Methods of Demur, and Appeal, have been us'd to weary out the Plaintiff, and frighten him out of the Hope of Juſtice; and when it has all prov'd in vain, and they grew apprehenſive that the Storm was ready to fall, even ſecret, and artful Applications have been made, to compound a Miſchief, and evade a Trial.---Bribes, they are very ſenſible, had an exceeding great Influence on the Generality of Men; and while that Remedy remain'd, they imagin'd there was little Reaſon to deſpair; but I congratulate Mankind on ſome Inſtances of Honeſty however, where even Bribes have fail'd.---So unwilling have theſe pious Reformers been to ſuffer any Diſgrace to their Cauſe, or allow the moſt abandon'd Villainies a ſuitable Puniſhment!---Upon the whole, the moſt effectual Way to reform the Community, and do Honour to the Magiſtracy together, would be, to diſtinguiſh Men only of Education, Fortune and Integrity, by Commiſſions: Men, who from a Love of their Country, would accept of the Employ, and diſcharge it, in a Manner ſuitable to that Principle: Men, who would be ſuperiour to the little mercenary Artifices of oppreſſing Mankind for Profit; or protecting Villainy for Bread.---Under ſuch a Regulation, we might expect to ſee Decency and Peace preſerv'd together. The Influence of their Behaviour would be as effectual as their Power; we ſhould regard them with real Reverence, and be more touch'd with their Reprehenſion, than a Commitment. The wild and diſſolute Libertine would be aſham'd of coming before him as a Criminal; and would recollect, he had debas'd himſelf below the Level of a Gentleman, in making him his Superiour. The Poor would have their unhappy Controverſies decided, without the Vexation and Expence of a Law-Suit; Pariſh Officers, and ſelect Veſtries, would be aw'd into Reaſon and Juſtice, by the reaſonable Interpoſition of ſuch a Magiſtrate; in a Word, the Dignity of the Bench would be maintain'd, and a Juſtice of Peace, be but a more ſignificant Word, for a Man of Honour.

VERSES to a Young Lady with the SPECTATORS.

THanks to the Men, who led by gen'rous Views,
Reliev'd the Age from Politicks and News;
Retail'd Inſtruction, at a cheap Expence,
And where Men ſought Amuſement, gave them Senſe.
Unequall'd Genius form'd the happy Plan,
Immortal Addiſon, that wond'rous Man,
Beyond each other Britiſh Muſe approv'd,
While Learning Wit and Virtue are belov'd:
Steele, his Aſſociate in the Work of Fame;
And great his Share, to bear a ſecond Name.
A num'rous Tribe their friendly Labours aid,
Each modeſt Author lurks beneath the Shade;
Tries his young Parts, and if produc'd to Light,
Enjoys th' Applauſe, and dares again to write.
Still proud to ſee his fearful, firſt Eſſays,
Partaking in the fam'd Spectator's Praiſe;
Thro' more, and more Impreſſions yet ſurvive,
When Flying-poſts, and Journals ceaſe to live.

The nobleſt Rules of Action they convey,
With mighty Force, but in a graceful Way;
Inſtruct us, by a Method leſs ſevere;
For rugged Precepts wound the tender Ear.
They place the Ridicule of Conduct right,
With modiſh Follies wage ſucceſsful Fight;
Neglected Merit raiſe to juſt Applauſe,
Nor favour, nor diſguiſe an impious Cauſe.
Here in Deſcription we ſurvey Mankind,
And trace the various Tempers of the Mind;
All human Life exactly pictur'd View,
And in feign'd Characters diſcern the True.
Each Sex is drawn in a conſpicuous Light,
And ſhews its Beauties, orits Faults to Sight;
Rarely we find a faultleſs Nymph like Thee;
As faultleſs ſure, as Womankind can be.
Surpriz'd, we ſee what num'rous Follies reign,
Thro' every Rank and Quality of Men;
What Whims by Turns poſſeſs the giddy Crowd,
And Praiſe, and Blame improperly beſtow'd.
Here, Wit recovers from its long Diſgrace,
Throws off its Cloud, and ſhows its heav'nly Face;
Employ'd aright, to make us wiſe and good,
To check the dang'rous Influence of Mode;
To teach us Honour, Decency and Truth,
And fix the flexile Principles of Youth.
More regular Opinions now we frame
Of Faſhion, Dreſs, Behaviour, Worth and Fame;
Laugh at Impertinence, are ſhock'd at Vice,
Revere the Virtuous. and the Ill deſpiſe;
Enlighten'd more, and juſter Notions taught,
Of whatſoe'er is done, or ſpoke, or wrote:
The Sentiments in beauteous Language flow,
The Standards of our Stile, and Manners too.

With Pride ſuch Writings to your Toilet fly,
Implore your Reading, and invite your Eye;
For Wit is only ſeen, and reliſh'd well,
By thoſe, who in fine Senſe and Taſte excel.
Not to embelliſh more your Mind they come,
Where Nature's Bounty ſcarce has left them Room:
They'll entertain you, and pretend no more,
Where every Charm and Merit dwelt before.

The AGREEABLE MISTAKE.

WIthin the Shadow of a Grove,
To pleaſure ſacred, fit for Love,
The fair Ophelia ſleeping lay,
And dream'd the idle Hours away;
Where WAR's ſtern GOD the Virgin ſpies,
And views her with deſiring Eyes;
With ſoothing Sounds her Slumber broke,
And fondly thus the Maid beſpoke.

Wake, beauteous CYTHEREA, wake,
This happy Hour improve;
Whilſt VULCAN and his ſmutty Train
Are forging Bolts for JOVE.
Let us indulge this kindly Shade;
Again renew our Flame:
Let us, poſſeſt of preſent Joys,
Forget our former Shame.

Ophelia trembled, when ſhe heard
This am'rous Pray'r to her preferr'd;
And, like a Virgin free from Stain,
Repuls'd her Lover with Diſdain.
The GOD, unus'd to be deny'd,
In moving Accents thus reply'd.

Why, lovely Charmer, doſt thou check
The rapid Current of my Joy?
Oh! whence proceeds this ſudden Change?
VENUS ne'er us'd to be ſo coy.

Ophelia ſtill maintain'd the Field,
And modeſtly refus'd to yield:
Still ſtrove, and ſtruggled to be gone,
And fain would from his Arms have run:
Tho' proud to be ſo cloſe purſu'd,
And thought a VENUS by a GOD.
A thouſand Ways fond MARS eſſay'd
To ſoften the relentleſs Maid:
With many a Sigh he told his Pain,
And dropt a thouſand Tears in vain:
Tho' Sighs and Tears, they ſay, will move,
And paſs for Eloquence in Love.
At laſt, the amorous GOD of WAR,
Unable ſuch Repulſe to bear,
Reſolv'd by Dint of Force to gain,
What he by Art had ſought in vain:
Then, like a Soldier, ſeiz'd his Bliſs,
And raviſh'd from the FAIR A KISS.
The GOD, all over Tranſport, ſwore
VENUS ne'er charm'd him ſo before:
But, when more cloſely he ſurvey'd
The Mortal, beauteous, BRITISH MAID,
Well pleas'd with his MISTAKE, he ſay'd.

Henceforth no more will I become
The Laughter of the Skies;
But thy ſuperiour Charms adore,
And VENUS, Queen of LOVE, deſpiſe.

NEW ENGLAND.

Extract from the Journal of the Hon. Houſe of Repreſentatives.

Lunæ Die 21 Decembris, A. D. 1730.

Mr. Secretary brought down from his Excellency the following Meſſage, viz.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Repreſentatives,

BY Mr. Secretary I now communicate to you, his Majeſty's Order in Council to me, reſpecting what you are in Arrears to the Children of your late Governor, Mr. Burnet.

In this Order his Majeſty is pleaſed to take Notice, that you had at one time voted your ſaid Governor 6000*l.* and which his Majeſty commands me to acquaint you, in his Name, that he expects you now make good to his Children, or at leaſt ſo much as ſhall appear due to him for the whole Time of his Government, after the Rate of a 1000*l.* Sterling per Annum.

I am really ſorry for your Sakes, as well as on Account of the Orphans, that their juſt Due has been withheld ſo long from them; and ſtill to delay it, I am afraid his Majeſty would call a downright Contradiction of the ſolemn Aſſurances and Engagements you have made from Time to Time on this Occaſion, and ſo confirm the King and his Miniſters in the Opinion they have conceived, of the little Regard you have to your Promiſes, of honourably ſupporting his Majeſty's Governors: I hope you will therefore ſo conſider this Matter, as to diſcharge it with the greateſt Juſtice and Honour.

Dec. 21, 1730. J. BELCHER.

Extract of a Letter from the Santa Crux in the Canaries, dated Nov. 27. O. S.

About a Month is paſt ſince a fiery Irruption broke out in five Places in the Iſland of Gracioſa, one of the Eaſtermoſt of the Canary Iſlands, and moſt Part of the ſaid Iſland is now on Fire. We have alſo had an Earthquake in this Iſland, about 10 Miles from this Place; it cauſed a very great Opening in the Earth, which ſtill continues. The City of Lagona at the ſame Time was in great Trembling for ſome Minutes.

Extract of a Letter from Lisbon, dated the 11th Inſt. N. S.

The Badneſs of the Weather has for ſix Days paſt prevented us from getting to the Exchange, and has done immenſe Damage, particularly on the 9th, when the Wind from blowing hard at N. E. ſuddenly ſhifted to S. W. and made ſuch a high Sea on thr Bar, as has ſcarce ever been ſeen before: It happen'd then to be the Top of a Spring Tide, and raiſed the Water higher by ſeveral Feet, than at any Time in the 30 Years which I have now been here, and overflowed the Cuſtom-Houſe-Yard, and Ground Warehouſes, which were full of Sugar, &c. and 'tis believed not leſs than 3000 Cheſts of Sugar are deſtroy'd. There was much Salt on the Banks of the River, nine 10ths of which is loſt; and no doubt but St. Ube's ſuffer'd much: We fear we ſhall hear of bad News on the Coaſt.

Venice, Jan. 28. N. S. By our laſt Letters from Conſtantinople we are adviſed, that Ali, ſurnamed the Patron, Author and Ring-leader of the late Revolution, not content with the Recompenſe made him by the Grand Seignior, but riſing haughtily in his Demands of the principal Places for his Family or his Followers, his Highneſs took the Reſolution to get rid of that importunate Man, but with the neceſſary Precautions to prevent a new Revolution. In order hereunto, heſent to Gianum Coggia, Captain Baſhaw, upon the 30th paſt, to get together the moſt Mutinous of the Centurions, or Commanders of Bands of Janizaries, who were concerned in the late Revolt, and to make them believe their Advance was wanted in relation to the Affairs of Peace or War. Accordingly, the Capt. Baſhaw having held a ſort of Council with 36 of thoſe Mutineers, he went with them to the Seraglio, and deſired them to ſtay till he had communicated the Reſult of their Conference to the Grand Seignior; but no ſooner was he gone from them, than they were ſurrounded by 160 well-affected Janizaries, and cut in Pieces. This Puniſhment did not hinder Ali Patron from demanding, the next Day, that Gicca, Brother to his Highneſs's Interpreter, from whom he had received 100 Purſes, ſhould be nominated Woywode of Walachia, in the room of Mauro Caradd. The Grand Seignior granted him this new Favour; but a few Days after he took an Opportunity to have him and the new Aga of the Janizaries ſeized and ſtrangled; and there was found in the Houſes of thoſe two Rebels, almoſt five Millions of Gold, which was carried to the Treaſury in the Seraglio. The Grand Seignior having depoſed the Cham of Tartary Tributary to the Porte, who had been ſent for to Conſtantinople under Pretence of aſſiſting at a Divan, his Highneſs has given the Command of the Tartars to the depoſed Cham's Brother, who was baniſh'd to Barna ſome Years ago; and upon the 3d of Decemb. last, he received from the Hands of the Sultan a Sabre enriched with Diamonds, and a Caftan lined with Ermine. The Seraskier Ruſtick, who is gone to Perſia to negotiate a Treaty of Pacification, was made a Baſhaw with three Tails before he ſet out. The Divan has reſolved to demand conſiderable Sums of the Greeks and Jews, for his Highneſs's Acceſſion to the Ottoman Throne. The ſame Letters adviſe, that the depoſed Sultan, who is ſhut up in the Seven Towers, with the Princes his Sons, was magnificently treated there, and with the ſame Honours, as if he was ſtill upon the Throne.

Cadiz, Feb. 6. The Spaniards are making a Fort in the Form of a Half Moon, of 60 Guns, and work on it very briskly, which will annoy all the Ships that Anchor in the Bay of Gibraltar, ſo that there will be no longer lying there; and they talk of building another of 100 Guns on the Point of Cabritta near Tariffa; and a third on the little Iſland near Old Gibraltar.

N. B. This Paper will be continued Weekly, and all imaginable Care ſhall be taken to render it entertaining by all the Variety of Amuſement than can pleaſure the polite or curious Reader, without the Petulancy of a Party-War, or the Scandal of Grubſtreet.
